REPORT TO THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE SEPTEMBER 12, 2017

NAMING REQUEST – ST. MARTIN OF TOURS CHAPEL AT THE NEW ST. MARTIN CATHOLIC ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The Niagara Catholic District School Board received over $12.6 million in funding from the provincial government to replace the aging St. Martin Catholic Elementary School in Smithville. On Wednesday, December 9, 2015, Niagara Catholic broke ground on the site for a new St. Martin Catholic at 18 Streamside Drive, in Smithville.

On September 5, 2017, the first day of the 2017-2018 school year, arrangements were made for the St. Martin Catholic School community to participate in a memorable ceremony that honoured both the past and present St. Martin Catholic Elementary School. The school community assembled to say “good-bye” at the original school site that had provided over 50 years of Catholic educational excellence in Smithville, and then boarded school buses to move together, a kilometre down the road, to celebrate the new school opening. Over 400 students, along with staff, parents, Chair McNeil, Vice-Chair Burtnik, Director Crocco, Superintendent Baldasaro, Controller Whitwell and Mayor Joyner entered the new school building which includes a beautifully appointed school chapel at the entrance of the school.

In accordance with Board Policy 100.15, Naming of a Board Facility, Designated Area or Chapel,

All Chapels in the Niagara Catholic District School Board will be named after the Blessed Trinity, or a name for Christ, or a mystery of his life already accepted in the liturgy, or the name of the Holy Spirit, or a name for the Blessed Virgin Mary, or a name of a holy angel, or the name of a Saint, or the name of a blessed provided the Bishop has given permission.

1. All requests will be presented to the Family of Schools’ Superintendent of Education for consideration.
2. If supported by the Family of Schools’ Superintendent of Education, a recommendation will be made to the Director of Education for consideration.
3. The Director of Education will consult with the Bishop of the Diocese of St. Catharines for endorsement.
4. If supported by the Director of Education and endorsed by the Bishop of the Diocese of St. Catharines, the Director will present the recommendation to the Board of Trustees for consideration.
5. The Board of Trustees will approve the naming or renaming of a Chapel within a Board facility.
6. The name of the Chapel within a Board facility will be displayed with an appropriate interior sign or lettering.

Recommendation

A recommendation has been made by the Family of Schools' Superintendent of Education, and Principal of St. Martin Catholic Elementary School to the Director of Education - to name the chapel at St. Martin Catholic Elementary School - after St. Martin of Tours. The Director of Education has consulted with the Bishop Bergie of the Diocese of St. Catharines and received Bishop Bergie's endorsement of the recommended name for the chapel.

Born in Sabaria, modern day Hungary, in 316, Martin was raised in Italy by non-Christian parents. The son of a military veteran, by law he was forced into service with Roman army at the age of fifteen. During a military mission in France on a cold winter day, Martin encountered a shivering beggar. Having no money to offer, Martin removed his cloak, tore it and wrapped half around the man and half around himself. Later that night he had a vision of Christ wearing his cloak and saying, "Martin, a mere catechumen has clothed me." The next day he resolved to be baptized and after completing his catechumen studies was baptized at the age of eighteen. After being discharged from military duties, Martin began his ministry of preaching and later was made Bishop of Tours, a position he faithfully carried out until his death in 397.

We are requesting the chapel at the new St. Martin Catholic Elementary School be named after St. Martin of Tours. His full title, St. Martin of Tours, is an acknowledgment of the service and leadership he provided to the people of Tours over the course of his twenty-five year ministry as their bishop. While his encounter with the beggar in France is often the most recognized image of St. Martin, it was his time in Tours that set him apart as a true shepherd and faithful servant of God. He is credited with numerous healings and miracles and his preaching drew large crowds from cities and villages far beyond Tours. Christian peacemaking was a theme throughout his episcopal ministry as the Bishop of Tours even going so far as to oppose violence against heretics. Firmly rooted in his faith, and devoted to a life of service to Christ, St. Martin of Tours is a great model and witness to the faith we share and the life of service Christ calls us to.

RECOMMENDATION

THAT the Committee of the Whole recommend that the Niagara Catholic District School Board approve the Naming Request – St. Martin of Tours Chapel at the new St. Martin Catholic Elementary school, as presented.

Happening in Secondary Schools

- On May 31st, we had our "Toonies for Torches" day. Saint Francis raised $850.00, Blessed Trinity $225.00, Holy Cross raised over $536.00 for Special Olympics. All of which will go to the Special Olympics organization.
- We are in the midst of all of our transition meetings with our family of schools, and are planning ahead for the new students coming to us in September.

Blessed Trinity

- Our soccer team qualified at the Special Olympics Ontario regionals and have now advanced to the Provincial Championships at Brock University on June 12, 13. The provincials will feature 12 teams from across the province, Canada and the United States and involve nearly 900 athletes. We are looking forward to competing at this level!
- We had a few amazing acts of kindness happen this week, however they were anything but random. Three BT students who play lunchtime basketball with one of our students, pooled their money and bought him a beautiful pair of LeBron James basketball shoes. They recognized a need and our student's passion for the game and decided to act with compassion and selflessness – truly inspiration.
- In addition, two of our students are graduating this year. A BT student who spends much of his free time helping out and participating in the various field trip events that we often go on, decided to ask both of these girls to prom. It's amazing to see a young man so passionate about inclusion!
- Our Educational Resource Teacher is taking a group of students to Niagara College on June 8th as part of the Community Connected Experiential Learning initiative.

Saint Francis

- Special Education Classroom students will be playing on a "unified" team (in conjunction with students from Holy Cross) in the Special Olympics Basketball Championships at Brock University on June 12th and 13th.
- One of the students from our Special Education Classroom will be leaving our school after 7 years with us! He will be missed! Will be hosting a small graduation celebration in June in our Special Education Classroom!

Denis Morris

- The Special Education Class soccer team is geared up to attend the Special Olympics at Brock University June 12th and 13th. In addition to the soccer games they will play, the athletes will participate in a number of exciting events including, opening exercises, team meals, and an athlete dance. Mr. DiLorenzo is planning to fill two fan buses to send to the games to support the team.
- Best Buddies update:
- Twelve DM students attended the Toronto FC on May 26th, compliments of team captain Michael Bradley.
- Whooping it Up Free Throw Competition was a great success. Our chapter raised about $300 from the BBQ and free throws. The money was used to take 50 students to a private viewing of Guardians of the Galaxy 2 at Landmark Cinemas. A bus of Notre Dame students joined us at the movie.
- NCDSB Project is sending 12 Special Education students from Denis Morris to visit Niagara College on June 8 to familiarize themselves with the CICE program, as well as other college services.

Holy Cross

- The Holy Cross Special Education Class are having a ball using the cameras that were purchased using Best Buy's Tech Grant. We enjoyed a walk outdoors and took various pictures in nature as chosen by the students. The students proceeded to download their photos and pick one to be printed for Mother's Day. These pictures were framed and titled as gifts for their moms.
- Our Special Education class hosted their pen pals from St. Thomas Aquinas today. We gathered in the Chapel and listened to Mendelt and then had lunch together. Lunch was pasta and sauce made by one of our own students followed by ice cream cones. Our students enjoyed finally meeting their pals they have been sharing with the entire semester.

Saint Michael

- Five students from the Special Education class are going to the Special Olympics Provincials in the sport of Bocce. This event will be held at Brock University next week.
- Our Special Education class also has two students participating again for OFSAA track and field. We are very proud of their performances.

Notre Dame College

- On Friday June 2, 2017 Notre Dame hosted the Bi-Annual Raptors Basketball Event. Teams represented the Special Education Area from each of our 8 high schools in a morning of friendly competition. A pizza lunch and dance followed. The day was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.
- On Monday May 30, 2017 our students joined up with students from Denis Morris to enjoy a private movie viewing at the Landmark Theatre at the Pen Centre. It was another wonderful day enjoyed by students and peer tutors.
- Two of our students participated in qualifying and SOSSA meets for running track events on May 18, 2017. Both students gave their best effort. One of our students went on to win at OFSSA this past week.
- Students also participated in the trip to the Ontario Gallery of Art. We had a fantastic tour of the Georgia O'Keefe exhibit, as well as participated in printmaking and sculpture workshops. This was an amazing educational experience, developing art skills and having exposure to beautiful pieces of art.

To Whom It May Concern

Shelley Gilbert, a close friend and fellow Vincentian has told me of her desire to once again be a Community Representative for the Society of St. Vincent de Paul with the Niagara Parent Involvement Committee. Within the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, Shelley has held many positions and presently is the Central Council President responsible for ensuring that all Vincentians live the Gospel message by serving Christ in the poor with love, respect, justice and joy. Shelley is always willing to pitch in and offer assistance whenever and wherever needed and she does so with great joy and a desire to see change. Recently, under the direction and supervision of Shelley, the Society of St. Vincent de Paul for the diocese of St. Catharines successfully collected and filled a sea container with clothing, hygiene and laundry products as well as non-perishable food items to be shipped to Naujaat, Nunavut. It is my belief that Shelley will be a valuable asset to the committee and will represent the Society of St. Vincent de Paul as a true Vincentian living the Gospel message. Should you wish to speak with me further please feel free to contact me at 905-684-4784 or 289-241-2004.

Louise Librock

Good Day All,

I would like to start out by thanking Mr. Vance Badawey- MP Niagara Centre, and Mr. Micheal Couteau- Minister of Children and Youth Services Responsible for Anti-Racism for your support in early 2017 after my residence was a target of racial crime and hatred, your support was much needed and very well received by my family. It could not have come at a better time. I would also like to let it be known that local support from the Niagara Catholic District School Board went above and well beyond my expectations. Never in my life did I expect a monetary donation from the Lakeshore Catholic High School staff and students. This donation went directly to the children involved and immediately picked up their morale which up until this point was spiraling downward very quickly, so for that to Mr. John Crocco-Director of Education and Secretary Treasurer, Mr. Glenn Gifford-Principal, and Mr. Andrew Boon-Vice Principal, they were all in constant phone contact with me offering all and any support that I might need, thank you very much!!! They helped transform and act of hatred into an act of great community support. These people acted exactly the way professional educators should act when they are in care and custody of your children, especially during times of crisis and need. They went above and beyond to support myself and my family, they helped support the local police department during investigations and for this I will be forever grateful. We as parents hear how good the Catholic education system is good for families and students but until you truly live it you then realize what a great job these professionals do day in and day out, year after year, thank you, thank you, thank you. Outstanding job!!!

Best Regards,
Tim Benner

Committee of the Whole Takes to the Road to Niagara Launch Centre

Trustees and Senior Staff took to the road for the first Committee of the Whole Meeting of the 2017-2018 school year.

The September meeting took place at the Board's state-of-the-art technology training hub, the Niagara Launch Centre – Powered by Niagara Catholic District School Board, which is located inside the former Target store at the Seaway Mall.

The 12,000 square foot facility is home to a number of innovative new programs, including automotive service and repair and a variety of construction technologies. It came to life after many years of Niagara Catholic utilizing space in public locations in Welland, including the former Canadian Tire store on Niagara Street, and unoccupied storefronts in Seaway Mall. The Niagara Launch Centre is the culmination of these experiences, as well as consultation with students, staff, parents, the community, local industry and the Ministry of Education.

The Board was praised for its commitment to providing students with the most current, relevant and innovative career paths by those in the know, including Niagara Workforce Planning Board CEO Mario DeDivitas, Kevin Hart, National Sales Manager for In-House Solutions, a technology software provider, Steve Hett, the Ontario Technology Training Manager for Bell Canada, and Nick Ciccone, Training Director for the Labourers' International Union of North America (LiUNA), Local 837. Mr. Ciccone also presented a $10,000 cheque to Director of Education John Crocco and Board Chair Father Paul MacNeil to help fund the Launch Centre.

Following the presentation of the report to Committee of the Whole, trustees and senior staff were able to view the students in action, as they showed off their skills in their respective areas of study.

Trustees Approve Recommended Name of New St. Martin Catholic Elementary Chapel

On September 5, the St. Martin Catholic Elementary School community celebrated the opening of their long-awaited brand-new school. A week later, Niagara Catholic trustees recommended that the Board approve naming the new school's chapel after the school's namesake, St. Martin of Tours, during the Committee of the Whole Meeting. The name recommendation was endorsed by Bishop Bergie.

St. Martin of Tours was born in Sabaria (modern-day Hungary) in 316 to non-Christian parents, and was raised in Italy. During his mandatory military service, Martin encountered a beggar in France, shivering in the cold. With no money to offer, Martin took off his cloak, tore it in two and shared it with the beggar before going on his way. That night, he had a vision of Christ wearing his cloak, saying, "Martin, a mere catechumen (a person training to convert to Christianity), has clothed me."

Martin was so moved by the vision he resolved to be baptized. After completing his studies, Martin was baptized, began his ministry of preaching and was later made Bishop of Tours. Firmly rooted in his faith and a life devoted to the service of Christ, St. Martin of Tours is an excellent model and witness to the faith we share and the life of service we are called to by Christ.

Trustees will consider the motion during the September 26 Board Meeting.

2017 Summer Camp Program Hailed as a Success

Niagara Catholic's first-ever summer camp program drew 275 elementary students to six sites over five weeks this summer.

The 2017 summer camp program was an integrated program that consisted of the Summer Learning Program for students with high literacy and numeracy needs, and a traditional summer camp. Students participated in a variety of activities themed around life skills, pathways planning, active living and general interests, all of which were infused with literacy and numeracy.

Modules in the 2017 summer camp program included Home Sweet Home (reading and following instructions, basic assembly, fixing and maintenance, budgeting, sewing and crafts); Master Chef (preparing nutritious and popular meals and snacks, with the emphasis on reading instructions, measuring/proportions and counting, as well as on the importance of using local produce, nutrition, health and wellness, gardening and safe food handling); Nuts and Bolts (woodworking and tool basics, which allowed students to learn to read blueprints and diagrams to learn measurement, scale, angles and calculation, building hand-eye co-ordination as they created their own projects); On the Move (focusing on common and alternative modes of transportation and energy forces, as well as calculating distance, speed and time, fuel consumption and power); and Robotics (by building a robot through the VEX program). The camps took place at Our Lady of Victory Catholic Elementary School in Fort Erie, Blessed Trinity Catholic Secondary School in Grimsby, Saint Michael Catholic High School in Niagara Falls, Lakeshore Catholic High School in Port Colborne and Holy Cross Catholic Secondary School in St. Catharines.

ONTARIO LEGISLATIVE HIGHLIGHTS

WEEKLY ROUNDUP

THE BAD WITH THE GOOD — While the provincial election won't officially begin until May, there is not an announcement made without a thought about how it will play on the campaign trail. On that front, internal polling has no doubt buoyed Liberal prospects as they are being told their recent policy announcements are gaining traction — even if their leader continues to languish at dismally low levels. While most public opinion polls have the PCs maintaining a lead over the Liberals, internal polls conducted for the governing party over the past nine months — albeit by the Gandalf Group and David Herle who is leading the Liberals' 2018 election campaign — indicate widespread popular support for increasing Ontario's minimum wage, implementing carbon pricing and even measures to provide rebates on hydro bills, a particularly contentious matter for the government. All of this while Premier Kathleen Wynne's personal popularity sits at around 15%. With this information in hand, expect the Liberals to do all they can to make this election more about policy than personality. Wynne implied as much in a short video she posted to Twitter this week where she said her job is not to be popular, but is to build a more fair Ontario: "Whether people like me or not, I'm really glad that people think that free tuition for kids who live in low income families is a good idea. I'm really glad people think that having free medication for kids from zero to 25 is a good idea. I'm really glad people think that raising the minimum wage is a good idea. And that makes for a fairer Ontario."

WHAT NOMINATION ISSUES? — Wynne wasn't the only party leader to get some good polling news where trouble was thought to lay. According to a recent poll conducted by Forum Research, more than half of Ontarians say they are not aware of the issues that have been plaguing the Progressive Conservatives and Leader Patrick Brown when it comes to the nomination of candidates. Among the roughly 43% who say they are aware of the issues, a third say it has made their opinion of Brown worse — but it should also be noted that more than half of those folks identified as NDP and were unlikely to be voting for the PCs anyway. These figures make for an interesting study of the so-called political bubble, occupied by those who are actively engaged and/or attentive observers of the happenings at Queen's Park, on Parliament Hill or in their local city hall. Quite often, issues emerge that seem massively important within that bubble, but the reality is outside of the political bubble — where the vast majority of Ontario residents reside — they barely cause a ripple. PC Party insiders are hoping this poll is painting that exact picture. While committed Liberals and NDP harp on the nomination irregularities in some ridings, most Ontarians are not tuned in, and likely won't be until the campaign kicks into high gear next spring when it is hoped more pertinent policy issues will be occupying the stage. The Forum poll surveyed 981 Ontarians on August 23rd and 24th, with a margin of error of three per cent, 19 times out of 20.

NORTHERN REFLECTIONS — The chances of the Northern Ontario Party sending an MPP to Queen’s Park are as remote as, well, the northern reaches of the province. But that doesn’t mean the separatist party isn’t having an impact. It was founded with a mandate to create a new province out of Northern Ontario, but in the process has made strides to highlight the unique issues that face the north that perhaps are not being reflected in the highly urbanized Toronto power centre of government. And without question, with nine months to go until the election, the three major parties are jostling for the votes of Ontario’s northern residents:

- Wynne has been all over the north for much of the past couple of weeks. Her government recently announced the creation of two new ridings in the northernmost areas of Ontario, and she did a tour to highlight efforts to kick-start the infrastructure projects that will make the vast deposits of chromite in the area known as the Ring of Fire accessible.
- Brown brought his caucus retreat to Timmins last week to let voters in the area know the “North matters.” He wasn’t shy to point out that he has visited Northern Ontario 27 times since he became party leader in 2015. “Part of our tradition is every year we have a driving tour and we go through some of the worst snowstorms in some of the most dilapidated infrastructure, areas where there’s no cellphone reception,” he said. “It gives you a perception of some of the real challenges and why you have to put a northern lens on public policy being written at Queen’s Park.”
- The NDP have traditionally been the strongest in the region, and Leader Andrea Horwath isn’t going to easily cede any of that ground to her political rivals. Her most recent northern jaunt stopped in Kenora, Sioux Narrows and Thunder Bay where she was taking the government to task for staffing shortages in local hospitals, seniors care that doesn’t meet adequate standards and to state her support for development to the Ring of Fire — the right way: “I want to unlock the thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in economic activity this project promises,” she said, noting any efforts must respect Indigenous nations in the area as partners. “Unlike Wynne and the Conservatives, I understand the urgency.”

All of this attention on the north and general political uncertainty highlighted in public opinion polling is making political observers believe the election in the north may be more competitive than we have seen in the past. With the Tories staging a surprise win in the recent Sault Ste. Marie by-election, it is expected to be a real three-way race.

C’EST MANUFIQUE — With more than 600,000 francophones living in Ontario — and two-thirds of those in the Greater Toronto Area — the Liberals are set to introduce legislation that will create the province’s first French-only university. Recommended by the French-language University Planning Board last month, the proposed new school was touted by Advanced Skills and Education Minister Deb Matthews as an entity that will be governed for and by francophones. It is also looking at a downtown Toronto location, which will be a point of contention raised by the NDP; MPP France Gelin, who has several times introduced a private member’s bill for a French university in Northern Ontario, immediately raised concerns about the pockets of French communities in places like North Bay and Sudbury remaining unserved. However, with more than 400,000 francophones in Toronto, a site in the provincial capital simply makes sense.

RUMOURS & RUMBLINGS

ELECTION FORD-CAST

If there is one thing at which the Ford family excels, it’s generating media attention. Former Toronto city councillor Doug Ford was partaking this week with the pre-announcement of a pending announcement that he will next week decide whether he will challenge Toronto Mayor John Tory in the municipal vote a little more than a year from now, or carry the Tory banner in Etobicoke North in June’s provincial vote. He will make the announcement Sept. 8 at the family’s annual Ford Fest gathering. “People are fed up,” Ford said. “They put their hands in their pocket and you’ve got the municipal government in there, you’ve got the provincial government in there and you’ve got the federal government in there...It’s all ‘tax, tax, tax’ and ‘spend, spend, spend.’” Speculation is now running rampant about what that decision may be — but PC Party insiders say Ford will run provincially and that they are not only holding Etobicoke North open for him, but are also keeping adjacent ridings open for other candidates from the so-called Ford Nation. But the rumour mill is churning, with whispers that between now and the vote, Ford is expected to be a good soldier and support the party. But if Brown fails to unseat the unpopular Wynne, Ford is expected to make a quick strike to unseat him as leader and make a run for the post himself. Adding to the gossip is that Ford will not be alone in pushing for a quick change. It is doubtful another star candidate attracted by the Tories came on board to just be a cabinet minister or, in a worst-case scenario, backbench MPP in opposition. In that scenario, expect Caroline Mulroney to line up against Ford for the party leadership. Many insiders believe that race has already begun, even though Brown is still active and showing quite well — according to polls.

FOR THE RECORD

“I think it’s important because of the impact it’s having on my community. People are horrified, they’re traumatized, they’re worried about their children. We’re in a society where free speech is guaranteed and I’m very glad of that but putting out images that are so horrendous is not something that is responsible.”

- NDP MPP Peter Tabuns, who has joined with Toronto school board trustee Jennifer Story and city councillors Paula Fletcher and Mary Fragedakis in asking Attorney General Yasir Naqvi to file an injunction to block the distribution of graphic anti-abortion images and literature in vogue with pro-life activist groups.

“I don’t believe his name should be removed from schools in Ontario.”

- Premier Kathleen Wynne, while acknowledging that Canada’s first Prime Minister was “far from perfect”, refuting a call from the elementary teachers union to pull John A. Macdonald’s name from schools that have been named after him.

ONTARIO LEGISLATIVE HIGHLIGHTS

September 8, 2017

WEEKLY ROUNDUP

ROCK THE HOUSE – Technically it’s a legislative session, but everyone involved knows that when MPPs reassemble this coming Monday it will be about broad positioning far more than the minutiae of lawmaking. They will convene one more time before the provincial election in June 2018, but by next spring the parties will be in full campaign mode, so the period between now and December is the last real opportunity to use the Legislature as a springboard for policy stances. (This will intensify in November, when PC Leader Patrick Brown’s long-awaited policy conference takes place. Presumably he will emerge with the basis of a platform, which will then become central to his daily Legislature discourse.) Oh, there will be some legislative business, not the least of which will be processing the Liberals’ labour reform bill, which includes the contentious plan to hike the province’s minimum wage to $15/hr. The bill will assuredly pass – after plenty more debate, much to the Liberals’ delight as they are confident they have the public on their side. But even that will be more fraught than earlier in the current mandate. With Toronto Centre MPP Glen Murray having left Queen’s Park and no plan to fill the vacant seat before the general election, the Liberal majority is down to just five. They have a caucus of 56, minus Speaker Dave Levac, leaving 55 voting members, against 50 from the Opposition benches.

BRAD NEWS – Economic Development Minister Brad Duguid will be in his seat on Monday, but he won’t be looking to hang on to it next June. Duguid announced this week that he will not seek re-election, joining fellow Liberals Levac, Monte Kwinter and Mario Sergio as well as Tory Julia Munro on the path to retirement. As always in these situations, Duguid insisted his decision was not based on polls showing the Liberals headed to defeat, but was spurred more by the minor heart attack he suffered last year. “Like a good boxer ... you have to know when it’s time to go, personally,” he philosophized. “I’m not old, but I am old enough to know that the runway is shorter than it used to be – that now is the time to go and find another way to contribute.” Traditionally this kind of announcement triggers a cabinet shuffle, as an opportunity to raise the profile of backbenchers who are running again. But for now Duguid will stay put, as will the rest of the cabinet – at least until other incumbents confirm they’re on the way out.

COURT OF PUBLIC OPINION – However hostile the mood in the Legislature might be, it will be a welcome respite for most Liberals in the next few weeks, as they endure not one but two courtroom dramas with political ramifications. The cases are unrelated judicially but very much linked politically, as Liberal operatives defend themselves against accusations of wrongdoing. In Sudbury, proceedings are now underway to deal with allegations of bribery in the 2015 by-election – with Premier Kathleen Wynne slated to be a star witness for the defence – and next week will see the start of a criminal trial over alleged destruction of government documents related to gas plant closures in 2011. Not everyone is convinced that either or both trials will seriously damage the Liberals’ re-election chances (see below). But the Opposition parties are gung-ho to amplify the relatively minor charges into the equivalent of political war crimes. As several Tories have put it in media interviews, this is “Liberal corruption on trial.”

“You have to put this all in context. The Tories are going through their own mini-crises with riding association battles and legal things going on and police being called in. It’s not just the Liberals, it’s happening to the Tories as well and we don’t know how this is going to play out in the campaign. The other thing is, how much of this has already been discounted? With [Sudbury MPP Glen] Thibeault, this was a cloud hanging over even the last byelection, but voters held their nose and they voted for Thibeault, they held their nose and voted for the side of government.”

- Paul Seccaspina of Oraclepoll Research.

POLL DANCE – Regular polling should give some indication as to whether the court cases are having any impact on public sentiments and voting intentions. According to the most recent baseline, a late-August survey by Forum Research found Brown’s Tories still holding a commanding lead, with 40% support among decided voters, well ahead of a statistical tie between the NDP at 27% and the Liberals at 25%. This result brought some joy to the NDP, whose supporters chortled on social media that it shows Liberal efforts to outflank them on the left (e.g., $15 minimum wage) aren’t working.

SOUTHWESTERN UNION – As they watch judicial events unfold in Sudbury, it must gall the New Democrats to know that all of this started when they won the seat in 2014, only to have their MPP decide a few months later that the Queen’s Park lifestyle wasn’t for him, triggering the by-election that snowballed into the bribery saga. But as much as the NDP still sees Northern Ontario as fertile ground, they focused their attention on the other end of the province this week. Leader Andrea Horwath convened a three-day caucus retreat in Chatham-Kent – kicked off by a luncheon with about 100 local community leaders – to prepare for the upcoming legislative session. “We decided to come to southwestern Ontario to have this meeting, because we think that this area ... has got a great deal of potential,” Horwath enthused to the Chatham Daily News. “There’s a lot of great things going on here and we think that this particular region deserves a government that’s going to partner with you and share your vision.” Following the 2014 election the Liberals, despite having won a majority, targeted the Southwest (along with Niagara) as an area for improvement. Since then, their flagging popularity province-wide has somewhat broadened their focus, but the dozen or so ridings between London and Windsor figure to be crucial to each party’s success or failure in 2018.

THIS BETTER WORK – Premier Wynne took dead aim at traditional NDP support in her annual Labour Day message – just the latest salvo in her out-left-the-left strategy. Usually these statements are bland platitudes about the value of Ontario’s workers, but Wynne’s language was quite provocative. “This year, Labour Day feels especially meaningful and relevant. I have spent the summer traveling around our province, and what I am hearing is that people are worried. They don’t know what the future holds, only that it is uncertain,” Wynne posited, addressing the “too many people in Ontario who can’t get ahead, don’t feel secure in their job or can’t get a fair deal from their employer.” That last bit was a direct shot at business groups opposing the minimum wage hike – and, by extension, the Tories they tend to support. “There have always been loud and strong arguments for the rich and the well-connected,” Wynne continued, drawing a line between big business on one side and government on the other. “The arguments for those struggling to make ends meet or just too busy getting by often go unheard or unheeded. Government exists to seek out and hear those voices.”

FORD EXPEDITION – Today’s the day former Toronto Councillor Doug Ford is expected to announce his electoral plans, and by most accounts he will opt to run for mayor, setting up a rematch with current Toronto boss John Tory. Speculation has swirled for months that Ford would throw his hat into the provincial ring, and the Etobicoke North PC nomination has reportedly been kept on hold for him. Not only that, but he is featured on the Ontario PC Party website, which touts “An Evening with Doug Ford” in Nepean on September 16, a fundraiser on behalf of MPP Lisa MacLeod (who, of course, can’t attend the event because of new fundraising rules). Nonetheless, rumours persist that PC Party brass made it clear to Ford they didn’t want him on their slate, because his brash style and right-wing views could hinder Brown’s kinder, gentler, more centrist thrust. Word is there was also distrust over Ford’s motivation, amid suggestions he was ready to pounce on a leadership bid should Brown falter in the election. Ford has denied that any such conversations took place, but there is talk that he is marshalling PC candidates throughout Etobicoke and other ridings, which would give him a core of support should the leadership scenario ever unfold.

FOR THE RECORD

“The public wants to know, are you managing your deficit? Are you going to balance the budget this year? Quite frankly, I don’t think the public is terribly hung up on accounting disagreements.”

- Treasury Board President Liz Sandals, after releasing public accounts showing last year’s deficit as $991 million – a figure disputed by Auditor General Bonnie Lysyk, who used different calculations to peg the deficit at $1.4 billion.

“I think that this is a very important move, that we recognize the importance of what are sometimes called ... global competencies to student learning in all areas. It’s important that we recognize that there’s more to life than the three Rs.”

- Annie Kidder of People for Education, welcoming a “refresh” of Ontario’s public school curriculum to focus on critical thinking, spurred in part by low math scores on standardized tests.

“It’s all the best farmland that’s been developed. Essentially it’s entombed forever under asphalt and cement.”

- Keith Currie, President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, supporting the province’s current public consultation on agriculture in the Greater Golden Horseshoe amidst ever-growing urban pressures.

“We go back to what his brother used to say: Be there for the taxpayer. Drain the swamp ... although I think that was another bushy-haired guy.”

- Joe Reis, a federal Conservative campaign organizer who has been actively working on behalf of Doug Ford, channelling the late Rob Ford – and U.S. President Donald Trump – in explaining why Doug has reportedly opted to run municipally. Reis also took a shot at Toronto Mayor John Tory, who Ford would be trying to unseat, sniping, “The only thing Tory about that man is his name.”

THE TRUTH, THE WHOLE TRUTH, ETC. – Ontario’s lawmakers may have re-assembled for their fall legislative sitting on Monday, but law enforcement was a preoccupation, as judicial proceedings with political ramifications unfolded on multiple fronts:

- Premier Kathleen Wynne made history by testifying in open court – unprecedented for a sitting Premier – as she took the witness stand in the Sudbury bribery trial. Historic yes, but memorable not so much, as Wynne said exactly what everyone expected her to say: unshakably insisting that she had already determined Glen Thibeault was going to be the Liberal candidate in the 2015 by-election – and therefore wannabe nominee Andrew Olivier couldn’t have been offered a bribe to voluntarily step aside. She spent the entire four hours standing – in high heels no less, a feat described as symbolic by Postmedia columnist Michele Mandel, who wrote, “There was no way she was sitting in the hot seat.” Because this was a courtroom and not a public inquiry, there were no cameras at the hearing, but there was plenty of media on hand as Wynne made her way in and out of the courthouse, and the appearance will likely resonate in the months ahead. The outcome of the trial will have more immediate impact – a guilty verdict and the critics have a field day; acquittal and the whole issue goes pfffft – but by waiving her parliamentary privilege and agreeing to testify, Wynne took a chance that voters will ultimately approve of her resolve.
- Wynne may have been in court, but she herself was not on trial – a point tersely driven home by her lawyers in a letter to PC Leader Patrick Brown demanding that he stop referring to it that way. Last week, Tory MPP Bill Walker was forced to apologize for comments during a radio interview, and this week a similar statement from Brown – “I hope that the premier will give us answers. We’re not getting them in the Legislature. Maybe when she stands trial,” he was quoted as saying – is now on the Liberal legal radar. The letter calls for Brown to formally retract and apologize for the slight. All of which is reminiscent of a tactic Wynne used against Brown’s predecessor Tim Hudak. He and caucus colleague Lisa MacLeod were sued for libel over accusations that Wynne “oversaw and possibly ordered” the deletion of emails related to gas plant cancellations. That $2 million suit was dropped after Wynne won the 2014 election, but it did put a chill into the Tories’ rhetoric in the meantime. So far Brown has shown no such inclination to back off, declaring, “her baseless lawsuit will be ignored.”
- The aforementioned email deletions are subject of another high-profile court case, involving the Chief of Staff and Deputy Chief of Staff to former Premier Dalton McGuinty. But it’s on hold at the moment amid legal wrangling. Having two corruption cases simultaneously was never going to be good for the Liberals, but they had hoped to get them over and done with as quickly as possible. Now, the trial of David Livingston and Laura Miller will have to wait until at least next week to start hearing evidence. Court did convene long enough for Livingston and Miller to formally plead not guilty to charges of illegally destroying documents related to the 2011 gas plant cancellations, and for Livingston's lawyer to describe police notes as "cryptic, unusually sketchy, as if by instruction" – hence, the legal wrangling over Crown disclosure.

JOINT ACCOUNT – Coincidentally – or not at all, according the Opposition – the Liberals chose the eve of the court cases for a major announcement about provincial marijuana sales when cannabis is legalized federally next July. A trio of cabinet heavy hitters – but not, notably, the Premier – unveiled the plan, with Finance Minister Charles Sousa, Attorney General Yasir Naqvi and Health Minister Eric Hoskins standing side by side to cover the fiscal, legal and health bases. Starting with 40 locations and expanding to 150 stores by 2020, the government will essentially replicate the LCBO model – albeit the 1950s model, with product hidden away, unlike the shiny modern liquor stores – to sell weed. Naqvi called it "a safe and sensible approach to legalization that will ensure we can keep our communities and roads safe, promote public health and harm reduction, and protect Ontario's young people." Not everyone agreed with this assessment. Currently-illegal private dispensaries will continue to be illegal – "If you operate one of these facilities, consider yourself on notice," Naqvi growled – which naturally displeased their owners. Canadian Federation of Independent Business President Dan Kelly also scoffed at the "public sector monopoly," arguing that "an above-ground, regulated private sector could stay much closer to customers' preferences and would guard against an underground industry." Politically, PC Leader Patrick Brown – careful not to sound like he's against legalizing marijuana – challenged the plan as half-baked, suggesting the Liberals just wanted an issue that would stir the...uh, pot. "[It was] a rushed announcement as a distraction technique," Brown sniped. "They don't want us talking about the Liberal corruption trials. They want us talking about some salacious issue."

SWEET LITTLE FIFTEEN – Speaking of issues the Liberals want people talking about, their proposed $15/hour minimum wage continues to be a hot topic. The narrative didn't exactly go their way this week, however, when a report from the province's Financial Accountability Office deduced that the hike will cost at least 50,000 jobs because it is "both larger and more rapid than past experience, providing businesses with a greater incentive to reduce costs more aggressively." Critics vigorously seized on the report as independent validation of their position, but Labour Minister Kevin Flynn wasn't conceding any ground. "People in Ontario support the notion that you work 35 or 40 hours a week ... you deserve to be able to pay rent, to buy food, put shoes on your kids' feet," Flynn asserted, adding, "The job-loss numbers are something that would be disputed by other economists." Notwithstanding the financial watchdog's analysis, the Liberals continue to see the issue playing in their favour, and indeed the other parties were treading carefully, attacking the LIBs' approach rather than the substance of the policy. Brown argued for slower implementation, positing, "What I'd like to see is just a level of reasonableness. Why does it always have to be the Premier's way or the highway?" NDP Leader Andrea Horwath aimed to get credit for the idea, while blasting the Liberals for giving the FAO – not to mention the Tories – ammunition to criticize. "We think the $15 minimum wage should be going ahead – that's why we announced it almost two years ago now – but there needs to be that work done," she fumed.

RUNNING STARTS – Provincial Tories came from far and wide to cheer on Caroline Mulroney as she was acclaimed as the party's candidate in York-Simcoe last weekend. The daughter of former Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is obviously seen as a new force for the PCs, leading to the unusually large turnout (for any kind of nomination meeting, let alone an acclamation) in Keswick. Brown took the opportunity to pitch his big picture message, crowing, "Caroline is a fantastic addition to our modern, inclusive and pragmatic Ontario PC team." Meanwhile, at another high-profile Conservative announcement, Monte McNaughton was the lone MPP on hand for the "Ford Fest" barbecue when Doug Ford confirmed he will be running for Mayor of Toronto next fall – and not, as had been previously speculated, as a provincial candidate. Many provincial Tories are heaving a sigh of relief that Ford will not be running on their ticket. There's little doubt Ford could have won Etobicoke North, but it is just as likely he would be a largely unmanageable new MPP that would be the source of problems for Brown from election day on. But the provincial problems aren't completely resolved. Ford's rematch with current Mayor John Tory sets up a quandary within the PC camp, inasmuch as many provincial PCs are Tory supporters while many others are in Ford's corner. They'll all be compelled to mute their criticism – even in the midst of what will surely be a nasty battle – to show a united front for the provincial election that comes first.

GONE TOO SOON – Much sadness in Ottawa and at Queen's Park this week with the passing of Liberal MP Arnold Chan (Scarborough-Agincourt). Prior to winning a seat on Parliament Hill, Chan was well-liked throughout Queen's Park as an earnest, enthusiastic aide to cabinet minister Michael Chan and Premier McGuinty. He had been battling cancer for a couple of years but that did not deter him from continuing his duties as an MP and his passion for and respect of Parliament.

IN THE HOUSE

- The Sault Ste. Marie by-election seems like eons ago (actually it was June 1), but newly-minted PC MPP Ross Romano had to wait until this week to take his seat in the Legislature. As the fall session got underway, the first order of business was for Romano to be escorted into the Assembly. A few minutes later he was up for his first-ever Question Period, grilling the Premier about recent Ring of Fire announcements, asking if she'd admit they were "nothing more than Liberal photo ops to win over voter support in an election year?" She admitted no such thing of course, and welcomed Romano to the Legislature with a droll, "It's great to have you here, but I have to say that we probably need to offer you a technical briefing on the Ring of Fire file."
- Attorney General Yasir Naqvi introduced Bill 152, the Representation Statute Law Amendment Act, to create the ridings of Kiiwetinoong, Mushkegowuk, Timmins, and Kenora-Rainy River – resulting in a total of four ridings in Ontario's Far North instead of the current two.
- Economic Development Minister Brad Duguid introduced Bill 154, the Cutting Unnecessary Red Tape Act, to amend 40 statutes across six ministries to reduce regulatory burdens on businesses.

FOR THE RECORD

“Connor McDavid was in junior kindergarten the last time the unemployment rate was this low.”

- Economic Development Minister – and hockey fan – Brad Duguid, referencing the NHL star to crow about Ontario's unemployment rate falling to 5.7%, its lowest level in 16 years, thanks to 31,000 net new jobs in August.

“Realistically, it is the only way they can maintain the integrity of the product. A stand-alone building is the only way they can do it. They're going to have to fortify it; they're going to have to have a big enough storage area [that's] climate controlled; [and] it has to be maintained.”

- Paul Sieger of Paul's Para Fernalia in Orillia, recognizing that a government monopoly on marijuana sales is needed for quality control. While private (and currently illegal) dispensaries will obviously be hurt, he expects paraphernalia shops like his can thrive selling “vapourizers, water pipes, bongs, rolling papers – whatever people use.”

“You have to know when it's time to go. I've given it a lot of thought. Obviously, I love the job and you can't ask for a more challenging opportunity as an individual. You never know who's walking in the door. You never know who is making the next phone call. To be on top of that is a permanent dance in the boxing ring."

- Retiring PC MPP Julia Munro, at the York-Simcoe nomination meeting to officially pass the torch to Caroline Mulroney.

WEEKLY ROUNDUP

FARMA CARE – Prior to this week most MPPs likely couldn't find Walton, Ontario, on a map (it's about 30 kilometres east of Goderich in Huron County), but many of them were there this week for the International Plowing Match and Rural Expo. Officially, it's North America's largest outdoor agricultural exhibition; unofficially it's the yearly opportunity for political parties to show how much they care about rural Ontario. It's such a big deal the Legislature recesses for a couple of days to enable large contingents from each caucus to make the trek, and the party leaders never pass up the opportunity to address the opening ceremonies. Alas, a couple of other annual traditions – and major photo ops – were thwarted by Mother Nature this year, when a downpour turned the fields into mud, nixing both the opening parade and the leaders getting on tractors in a contest to see who can plow the straightest furrow. As for the mood of the crowd, Premier Kathleen Wynne got a cool reception – which was an improvement over last year, when she was booed outright – while PC Leader Patrick Brown was, not surprisingly given his party's rural domination, given the warmest welcome.

THAT'S YOUR OPINION – PC support is still solid far beyond rural areas, according to the most recent Campaign Research survey, which reported 38% of voters province-wide backing the Tories. Unlike other polls, however, that level of support didn't translate into a big lead, with the Liberals only five points back at 33%, while the NDP trail at 23%. Digging a little deeper, the results do indicate a continuation of a couple of trends that are worrisome to respective party strategists, namely that Wynne's approval rating is still a dismal 19%, while fully half of the respondents still don't know enough about Brown to have an opinion one way or the other.

TRIAL BALLOONS – As the Sudbury bribery trial continues over alleged contravention of the Elections Act, another statute is now in play, with the Liberals citing the Libel and Slander Act in their threat of defamation action against Brown. Specifically, they are pointing to a provision allowing six weeks for a response, setting October 24 as the deadline for Brown to publicly retract his statement that Wynne herself is "on trial" before they proceed with the lawsuit. In the meantime, they will no doubt revel in Brown's discomfort – he repeated his stance that he will ignore the "baseless" lawsuit, but clearly doesn't want to say much more than that – as they try to turn the tables on a bribery trial that obviously makes them uncomfortable. Wynne doubled down this week, subtly likening Brown to U.S. President Donald Trump and allegations of a less than honest presidential campaign. "I deplore any behaviour that isn't based on truth," Wynne – who publicly supported Hillary Clinton against Trump – declared. "Let's just hope and pray that that's not the level of political debate that we're going to have here in Ontario or in Canada." If that linkage wasn't clear enough, Wynne made the direct connection, offering, "No matter who it is, whether it's the President or whether it's the Leader of the Opposition in Ontario, I don't think that behaviour belongs in politics."

There are lots of differing opinions without us descending into dishonesty and defamation.”

DRIVING FORCE – Motorists will be the subject of not one but two new pieces of legislation as the fall session kicks into gear. Transportation Minister Steven Del Duca served notice this week that bills are coming to toughen laws around drug-impaired driving – a necessity as recreational marijuana is legalized next year – and distracted driving – a necessity as cellphones continue to be on too many drivers’ laps. The latter legislation will also include increased penalties for drivers who fail to yield to pedestrians, Del Duca warned.

DiNOVO A NO-GO – Make it six current MPPs whose name won’t be on the ballot next June. Cheri DiNovo (Parkdale-High Park) became the first New Democrat MPP to say she’s had enough, joining four Liberals (Brad Duguid, Dave Levac, Monte Kwinter and Mario Sergio) and one Tory (Julia Munro) heading out to pasture. DiNovo had been rumoured to be considering retirement from Queen’s Park for a while, and this week she made it official. A United Church minister, she won’t wait until the election writ to bid adieu, announcing plans to return to her parish as of January 1. Presumably her seat will remain vacant until the general election, given that Wynne has opted against a by-election to fill the gap left by Glen Murray’s departure from Toronto Centre.

WHO WILL BE LEFT? – A month from now the NDP could be staring at another empty seat, as voting got underway this week in the federal NDP leadership campaign, with party members having until mid-October to cast their ballots. Which will mean a tense – but potentially exciting – few weeks for the provincial party. Current MPP Jagmeet Singh is considered a frontrunner for the federal NDP crown and, win or lose, the outcome will reverberate through the provincial ranks. If he wins he’ll have to resign his Bramalea-Gore-Malton seat, further depleting the NDP squad. If Singh comes up short, there’s the potentially awkward return to a provincial caucus he was trying to leave. On the other hand, NDP Leader Andrea Horwath is hoping to get a boost from the buzz Singh’s leadership bid generated, and her party should also see a surge of invigorated volunteers in the run-up to the provincial vote.

RED ALERTS – With the provincial election just months away, any talk of Wynne stepping aside as Liberal Leader has subsided, which is fortuitous as a couple of her predecessors are taking turns in the spotlight:

- Lyn McLeod, who was party leader from 1992-96, received the 2017 Distinguished Service Award Ceremony from the Ontario Association of Former Parliamentarians. Prior to the award ceremony, all three parties paid tribute to McLeod in the Legislature. “Lyn McLeod shattered a glass ceiling in this province: She became the first woman chosen to lead a major political party in Ontario,” Premier Wynne extolled. “I don’t think it is too much to say that she inspired a new generation of female politicians to put their names on a ballot and make a positive difference in public life. Lyn made it possible for me to stand here today as the first female Premier of Ontario. But to tell you the truth, I’ve always wished I could have been the second female Premier of Ontario, after her.”
- Former Premier David Peterson will be the guest speaker at the launch of a book about his speaking on Monday at Queen’s Park. Without Walls or Barriers: The Speeches of Premier David Peterson is a collection edited by journalist Arthur Milnes (a former speechwriter for Prime Minister Stephen Harper) and policy researcher Ryan Zade, with an introduction by TVO’s Steve Paikin. The tomes are $30 apiece, but they won’t be on sale at Monday’s event.

IN THE HOUSE

- In a week abbreviated by the two-day break for the International Plowing Match, no new government legislation was introduced.

FOR THE RECORD

“These are two different parties, two different philosophies, two different constitutions, two different ways of doing business. It's not like I was going to the NDP and asking them if they had that in the Liberal government."

- Sudbury Liberal MPP and Energy Minister Glenn Thibeault, at the trial around allegations of bribery in the by-election that brought him to Queen's Park. Thibeault, who was a federal NDP MP, testified that he had plenty of questions before deciding to defect to the provincial Liberals, and that it was a meeting with the Premier at her home – not any specific promises – that ultimately made up his mind.

"I see this as a war by Patrick Brown on local party members. There's no other way to explain it. The people who did get their paperwork in early, they're not even local residents. They think they can come in at the last minute, and carpetbag it ... but I don't think these outsiders would have a chance of winning against a local candidate."

- Jim Karahalios, a local activist who had been seeking the provincial PC nomination in Cambridge, but dropped out amid suspicions the vote was being rigged in favour of a candidate being parachuted in by the central party. Party President Rick Dykstra called the allegations in Cambridge – the latest in a long list of ridings where the Tory nomination process has been questioned – “categorically false.”

"Patrick shares my vision for pragmatic, progressive conservatism. It's why I'm proud to support him in his mission to form a PC government in 2018. I'm asking you to support him, too."

- Former Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, known as a mentor to the PC leader – and whose daughter is running provincially for the Tories – stepping directly into the campaign with a letter urging supporters to donate.

"We have spent a lot of time teaching people that if it seems too good to be true, it probably is. You have to build techniques and strategies to reassure people that they aren't going to be let down and it isn't a scam."

- Kwame McKenzie, special advisor to the province's basic income pilot project, noting they have had challenges getting interest from qualified people to submit applications for what essentially amounts to $1,400 per month, no strings attached.

MARIAN EVENT – SEPTEMBER 30, 2017

To the Board of Trustees of Niagara Catholic
c/o Fr. Paul MacNeil, Chair

Dear Father Paul,

On Saturday, September 30th, 2017, a special Marian Event will be held to recognize the Diocese of St. Catharine's Year of the Rosary, as well as the 100th Anniversary of the Fatima Apparitions. This family friendly event will be held at St. Alfred's Church, 272 Vine Street, St. Catharine's, and will begin at 8:30 am with mass celebrated by Bishop G. Bergie, followed by a Living Rosary celebration of the Joyful Mysteries. You are asked to share this information with your fellow Catholic School Trustees, promoting their attendance. A pdf file of the event poster has been attached to this email for easy sharing.

But perhaps more importantly, the organizing committee for the event cordially asks you to find two (2) representatives from Board and Senior Administration Council to participate in the Living Rosary. These volunteers will become one of the 'living beads' who leads a rosary prayer and places a flower before the statue of Our Lady of Fatima. Once you have identified these volunteers, please submit their names and contact information (phone number and email) to me by Tuesday, September 26th. If at all possible, your volunteers are asked to dress so to be identified with your organization.

It will be important for your volunteers to know that on the day of the event, before mass, they will need to report in at the Living Rosary table that will be set up in the vestibule of St. Alfred's Church where further instructions will be shared. During the Living Rosary, they will be seated in a designated area.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me.

Thank you for assistance and promotion efforts to honour Our Lady and pray for peace.
